“As primary care physicians, we are here to serve and guide, taking into account each patient’s priorities and values.”

About Meera Kelley, MD

Dr. Meera Kelley’s interest in medicine began while volunteering at a hospital as a teenager. “As primary care physicians, we are here to serve and guide, taking into account each patient’s priorities and values,” she says. She loves connecting with patients and encouraging them to become involved in the decisions surrounding their health. “I have been in leadership roles in healthcare for the past 15 years, and I am committed to fostering a better way to care for patients and to support others to do the same,” she explains. She finds it delightful to care for the senior population.

Dr. Kelley loves spending time with her husband, five grown children, and two dogs. She and her husband enjoy cooking and traveling in their camper van.
