“From helping to improve their health, to letting them know they have someone who truly cares about them, I want to always be a positive part of my patients’ lives.”

About Allison Cahalan, DNP, AGNP

Growing up, Allison Cahalan loved visiting nursing home patients with her mom. She explains, “It was then that my passion for the geriatric population developed.” She loves learning about her patients’ lives and celebrating their health victories.

“From helping to improve their health, to letting them know they have someone who truly cares about them, I want to always be a positive part of my patients’ lives,” she explains. She is passionate about preventive care and believes in “collaborative healthcare.”

In her free time, Allison Cahalan can be found playing with her two dogs or spending time with family and friends. She also enjoys watching live music, going to the zoo, and watching nature and history documentaries.
