“I listen to my patients. I allow them to discuss their concerns and try to offer viable solutions to put them at ease.”

About Abra Richardson, MSN, APRN, FNP-C

Abra Richardson has a passion for caring for people, especially the senior population. “I chose to pursue becoming a nurse practitioner to create a safe space for patients to experience compassionate care and to offer myself as a servant and advocate for seniors,” she says. Her favorite part of her profession is being a catalyst for improved outcomes in healthcare. She wants patients to know that she genuinely cares about them and wants them to feel valued. “I listen to my patients. I allow them to discuss their concerns and try to offer viable solutions to put them at ease,” she explains.

Abra Richardson has seven children and one grandchild. In her free time, she enjoys reading, traveling, and exploring museums.
