“Clear communication and encouragement are essential. I love educating patients on healthy living and how to better manage their conditions.”

About Vincent Ngo, MD

For Dr. Vincent Ngo, “clear communication and encouragement” are essential. He loves educating patients on healthy living and how to better manage their conditions. His favorite parts of his profession are “forming relationships and promoting healthy living.” He recognizes that the senior population is at risk for a variety of medical issues and is grateful for the opportunity to work with them. If he could make any changes within the current healthcare system, he would place “more emphasis on preventative care and public education.”

When he is not caring for patients, Dr. Ngo can be found cooking, traveling, or spending time outdoors. He also enjoys playing sports and practicing martial arts.
