“I want to work with our aging population to show them love, respect, and honor.”

About Tim Hutchison, MD, FAAFP

After shadowing a physician in the Emergency Department, Dr. Tim Hutchison knew that working in healthcare was his calling. He loves connecting with patients and strives to make them feel comfortable sharing their concerns. “I love treating all patients with respect and being non-judgemental,” he says. He explains that he has seen too many seniors failed by the medical community. “I want to work with our aging population to show them love, respect, and honor. I want them to age well with dignity,” he says.

Dr. Hutchison loves camping, reading, and spending time with his wife and two mini-dachshunds in his free time. He is also a huge sports fan and has run in fifteen marathons in three different countries.
